

What do we need jets to do and on what scales?

How do the jets do it? How is the jet energy communicated to the gas?

What observational evidence do we need to definitively show that radio feedback drives the shape of the galaxy luminosity function?

What would observers like to get from the simulations (and vice versa)?

What is the role of positive feedback?