

Each LOFAR station is capable of spreading its observing bandwidth over multiple beams on the sky. In the case of the low-band antennas, these beams can be pointed anywhere on the sky. This figure shows a simultaneous LOFAR observation of 5 pulsars at 24MHz. These pulsars are spread across the observable sky.

ASTRON

Netherlands Institute for Radio Astronomy

